

Inertia

In midst twilights of shaded curtains the moonlight peered and I saw you come quietly, suddenly

There you were, entwined in blankets spanning the infinite realm of serenity,

So peacefully

I gazed upon your ruffled skin and traced my touch;
Between your lines I caressed away my sorrow

Where will the extinguished flame of passions past burrow?
What wickless candle will it kindle tomorrow?

Let my gaze be there not only when the skies shine fulgently
Allow me to take your hand until we forget moments so vividly

Let us be blind, blind and narrow
Let Inertia take its course and stream away into the furrows

The Race

As our feet batter the ground for that one last breath at the finish line, we gasp in disarray

Has the race ended?

We have been running forever when we barely walked yesterday

Was this route intended?

Here we run upon invisible hills that block the horizon,
And the sun has not settled
We run among faded masks of rusty smiles,
I have ran for miles
My heart has yet trembled

I gasp for that last breath across the line as I run beside you,
Have your wounds been tended?
We will run side-by-side; grab the world on our shoulders,
We will smash it against unknown boulders,
Has this world contended?

Let us finish and climb the fear scrapers in our skyline
That quivering dot seems to be the finish line
Then lets us run and let time try to fulminate our wills
Let us commence our race beyond the steepest hills

(A)BLISS

I have stared at this abyss for too long
Heard the song you sang, on the roof before dawn
On frozen trains I thawed my way
Only for you my road will sway

I have dismissed all those I follow
In bliss I travel unbound and alone
The rails will swerve tomorrow,
When will I be gone?

The abyss stares back unloving
And still you will not shine this light
What is life if not the fight?
Oh Clarity, Will I find you tonight?
Will you be the lift to be flight?

The abyss commences to sneer
But I will remain steadfast
The abyss commences to fear
The day I will find you at last

ODE TO JUSTICE

As your steps faint shyly away into the horizon I reminisce of your song

And as I smile at the tones of your resounding laughter
For you I will forever long, from here to thereafter

Dream away my little friend and touch the skies,
Rise above the ground,
There is much beyond here to be found

I will keep you in my heart, a place there you have found
The glint in your eyes lights the night, a comet heaven bound

Till the end I will remember you, my Lilliputian friend,
Your steps wane away like the sand midst the wake

Forget me you will among your dandelion memories
I will be but a whisper, a muted tone among melodies

Fly away my friend and sing ballads to Justice,
Their gaze has shone on you as a radiant solstice

Fly away my friend, ode to Justice, ode and a cheer,

Again I will see you, fly away and never fear

The Kingdom

Is it possible to find someone in this time beautiful as you are?
Where the voice of your rumor sounds, my claims resound,
My drum will pound its rhythm thumping so unsound

My eyes, idolatrous, draw your lines, lost in contemplation,
Your words resonate their incantations,
Your eyes their sole meditation

Will I hold you till we part from dawn?
To have you redrawn, re-spawn, as your beauty invades my rampart

Your lines delicately superimposed, embossed to this bane existence

Make of me more than another prisoner, more than fool,
In this war, peace will not be soon
In a fulminating flash you will be gone,

A timid stare, a thought already flared,
A desire illuminated in glares
Gone, shun and done

Why did you have to sit on my throne?
Take me out of your kingdom and let my feelings be stoned
Roads I will travel, while casted away on a clouded dawn
Searching for you, never to be found
A mere vagabond wandering upon intertwined roads, Upon tattered drapes that lead to mosaic pictures of your laughter

Each corner of this second reminds me of you,

Where will I go after?
