

Time Extends

You think the world is coming to an end, but you wait and wait and time extends.

It seems that your life may go on, it pours out and out until the dawn.

But when you wake you can finally see, the aches my heart could never flee.

As time goes on I wonder how, you could break me until my final bow.

But light has finally shined within. And my heart is no longer an empty bin.

There's something there to ease my pain but can slip away like cold wet rain.

Never to be seen again.

Blurred Memory

With my eyes closed I see his cold face, an evil man in the darkest place. He laughs at the tears that roll down my cheeks,

a laugh that can be heard for several weeks.

To get away I open my eyes, and I see my life without its disguise. An ugly creature that darkens the sky, and feeds of constant sadness it can rely. In this world I can't get away, for the the troubles I have will forever stay.

My life Descends

The time is coming, the time of dread, a time like this beats deep in my head. Marching closer, it's drawing near, I see so much i have to fear. Every day stings more and more, it burns and throbs right to the core. My life won't be life anymore. My heart will break, because it can't take, the constant emptiness i can't mistake. And soon time lies underneath my feet, with my changes in life done and complete. With my heart forever more, my love will be locked inside a closed shut door. And horrid pains throughout my veins will rattle around my prison chains. In this cell I will take hell, with burning flames and darkness as well. And you think I can take this gone again? This evil burning song again? NO for when the time comes and is here and set, My life will shatter but i won't regret. Our love still there though you'll be long away, In my cell will be where I lay. And sad enough I will not stay. There will be no more for me to be, I will be blind and cannot see. And there will be no more of me. For then my dear life will end, because for me my life descends.