

Almost

Once you were My Everything
Now you're Almost That
But the difference is stunning
And there's no going back.

Auburn

In a field of lilacs and lilies
The sun sets on fallen leaves
A girl lays there with her lover, bare,
As her mother calls and grieves

His hands comb through locks of her auburn hair
And her coy mouth bites upon his neck
The Sea surges with a lustful jealousy somewhere
As a ship becomes a wreck

They clutch each other closely
Passionately playing songs on tender hearts
Their young bodies cleave to each other
Barely aware they must rend apart

The waves continue to crash
Insatiable, the passionate seas
Their love burns, and in a flash they turn
The lilacs and lilies to ash in the breeze.

Azure

Through the fields of rough diamonds we walked
Across midnight showers into Spring
Where you kissed me, once, so tenderly
I was scared of the hours that it would sting.

Now, I see

I used to think that the ocean
Was a family of running streams
But now I know that an ocean flows
Because one river stayed true to its dreams.

Pink and Blue

One day two children sat
And stared out across the stars
From the center of a city
Caught in the shadow of their scars

They kissed each other through the midst of 'I love you's'
Their hearts embraced together through breathless sighs
Ineffable colours swirled as he twirled her
And lost himself forever within her eyes.