

Connection

By Deb Wilkinson, 1/17/2018

There's an essence in the universe
An unexplained energy
Within every living thing
Even the dirt beneath our feet
Holds the secret molecule that makes us unique
The air we breathe, the ancient magnificent trees that grow
Life sustaining water
Gently flowing streams and rivers
Immense and powerful oceans
Fathomless creatures that swim, fly and run fearlessly upon the earth
And humans
This curious, unexplained radiance of the cosmos
Dwells within us

We are all connected by the mysterious molecule of life
It encompasses us
Like a dimensionless bridge.
Uncomprehending the vastness of creation,
We furl about aimlessly
In our own little compact comforts,
Wasting the ultimate power that binds us together

What if this phenomenon within us all is triggered by community,
The sharing of resources and experiences,
Compassion, transparency, truth?
Trapped within selfish, materialistic souls
The energy is stifled.

What if God within us was empowered
By connecting to all throughout our world
Through this living phantasm?
Strength resulting not from individual gain
But by allowing the energy to build
Ember to spark to flame to fire to astonishing accomplishments of peace and hope
Power created by life itself
Even the stubborn godless would not be able to escape
True love unshackled
Oblivious to shades of skin or language or traditions
Intertwining within families, friends and strangers alike
The oneness envelops us all
The one tiny inconceivable part that makes us human Connects us

Is it God?

Those that believe say it is

Those that don't, see a large explosion billions of years in history

That created

What?

Life?