

A lonely gypsy wanders the forest.
The birds in the trees sing her their chorus.
Her hair so rich and black,
For beauty she does not lack.
She walks beside a stream,
With water so lucid it gleamed.
Thinking of another life and time,
And the family she left behind.
Searching for meaning, her journey just begun.
The heat of the day subsiding, results from the setting sun.
Stopping a moment to listen, absorbing the natural sounds.
The sweat on her body glistens, unique beauty surrounds.
Slipping into the water, she cools the tiredness down.
Splashing around with laughter, such a pleasing sound.

Watching from a distance careful not to be seen.
He gazes in amazement at a sight so pristine.
A creature so elegant and pure, a sight he has never seen.
A dream so luscious and sweet, a fantasy that is so serene.
Sensing a gazing presence, she looks around to see
Then she sees the man, the man beside the tree.
Instantly she is drawn, the aching in her rises.
She sees him waiting there as the sultry moon rises.
The look of their eyes enticing, the craving and the need,
For what they are feeling deep down is greed.
They see sparks. They see flames. Each other's soul mates?
What's brought them together, a strange twist of fate?
Is it madness? Is it lust?
Is it sane? Is it just?
Two people meeting, instantly thrown.
Two people seeing what they've always known.

He wades in to the water, a man filled with need.
He swims up beside her, as close as can be.
Not a word is spoken. Not a doubt in their minds.
The knowing is certain, right place, right time
Touching her and holding her, all he wishes to see.
Tasting her and teasing her, setting an animal free
Kissing and caressing, igniting his every need.
Right here with him, where she's meant to be.
Undressing each other slowly, standing side by side
Arms reaching for each other, passions about to collide
The tiny moans, the seductive whispers,
The roaming hands, the bodies quiver
Fast as it begins, slow it becomes
Writhing in agony, both of them succumb.

Breathing rough and ragged, they hold on a moment longer.
The love inside them grows stronger and stronger.

He lifts her from the water, cradling in his arms
She holds on tightly, relenting to his charms.
He lays her down so gently, careful not to pain.
She smiles at him so sweetly, her love will never wane
A fire was started, a blanket laid out.
The night grew quiet and the stars came out.
Entwined with each other, lying so close
If they stayed here forever, would anyone know?
Lying together under the night sky,
They never once ask just how or why.
Dawn slowly approaches lighting the skies.
They look at each other, questions in their eyes.
Can they be together make a life that thrives?
Can it last forever? Will their love survive?
Two people from opposite worlds, their lives may be tough.
Two people with love in their hearts, love will always be enough.