

Mother Nature's Song

By, Samantha Krasnicki

Close your eyes for a moment and feel the rhythmic breeze

Feel it blow through your hair and put your mind at ease

Listen to the birds as they twiddle and tweet

Watch the trees sway and hear their melody

It's Mother Nature's song that she sings annually.

The snow begins to melt and the ground begins to thaw

As you stand there listening to her peaceful little song

While you're standing there something feels wrong

Your eyes begin to flood and your skin begins to crawl

The melody becomes broken and the song starts to slow

Our mother she is hurting and how, we all know

She has raised us all and given so much

We continue to take purely out of lust

The strong filtered river now littered with trash

Thinking our mother is fine is extremely rash

The snow that has melted and the grown that has thawed

Has thrown of Earth's balance and caused her downfall

The song that once played is broken into parts

The melody we once felt deep in our hearts

Is Mother nature's song and it's falling apart.
