

Lamented Angel

1

I bathed in the serene sea of serenity
Setting all the terrible scenes so free
Judged by only the worries of an earthly me
Expunged of my sins no longer worthy to me
I bathed in the serene sea of sanity
For all these years was this angel free
Swimming in the oceans of the halo's light
Dripping in the open of so many heroes in sight
I bathed in the serene sea with so self-possession
Never to believe a need for another so transgression
Days I would spend in the ocean so calm and open as I swim
The ways I pretend I was never with qualms & broken as I drift
I basked in the serene sea of self-love
Casted as the characters I only wished to have Blinded am I, by angels and holy flatterings to the front of me
Bounded is I, by the false and unfairly chatterings so abundantly
I basked in the serene sea of self-loathing
Entranced by my lack of sense I see enclosing
I must ask myself this, the one question that is so haunting
What is it I built on false tense that I can't face it is so daunting

2

I cast myself in the sea of caustic enemies
The last I beg of me to tell myself let it free
Laughing and lauding the golden jokes of the jesters given to me
Clapping & applauding my sodden jokes that fester tears in me
I cast myself in this sea of calamity
Not a chance do I have this within me
A selfish slave to the past I wished away without accepting part
An ageless wave I have cast in the wavering of a breaking heart
I cast off into the sea of this deliberate deceit
I was once the simple innocence of a Rose
Angered now by the wishes of a man who cut me boneless
Hanged am I by the sickness he had as my neck was noosed
I cast away right into the sea of sarcastic symphonies
Bash my head against notes of fantastic love that is so empty
Why do I make this hurt, a single curious & absent thought
I lie straight to this verse, this riddled chorus lacking in plot
I cast myself from this sinister sea, salted and lonely
To face all of this, the wintered me, fallen and ready
Down the heavenly stairs I begin to climb to my descent
My crown I readily break as I find all the justice for this

Lamented from this serene sea, I fall just below me
 Repented I am not of this, as I call, you must answer to me
 Spent all of this serenity in the sea, chained to the evil long past
 In debt to fall, from memories I have pained to never hold again
 Lamented to the great seas of my ancient earthly grave
 Regret leaves me as I finally see the fallen angel, be so brave
 Rusted no more as I cleanse my blade until it is sullied free
 Trusting me hence forth & I shall dance thee dead for killing me
 I, Lamented from the sea of heavens bathed in lights of serenity
 I, Rejected by the sands we swam in and refused to end it finally Criticized for all the wrongs, I was compelled to you
 Witnessed to the songs you composed about I & you
 No longer hostage and caged, I am coming for you
 An angel severed from her serenity of sea in the sky
 You, the Nameless man, be ready for this that you see,
 For this thee rots and I promise you it will not be heavenly
 You did this to me so do not forget that you proposed so willing
 To Me, The Former Girl of your Dreams,
 Fallen Down, it seems,
 Now, Your Lamented Angel
 With No Wings
