

Picture This

Everyone has a destiny
But not everyone chooses to follow it.
Seventeen years prior, two beings were put on this earth
To share and grow in one destiny together.

Fate waited patiently for these two to meet
It was not until age fourteen that they made this encounter
The two fell in love at once
It was a match made in heaven, written in the stars

My darkest days were brightened by one soul
Our love communicated in our own special language
It was a language only our hearts could understand
Because at the brink of disaster she was there to hold my hand

We were competitive, daring, and courageous
We would forget about common sense in order to achieve greatness
My eyes were forward and my hands were gripping her mane
As she flew through the air determined and strong

Her beauty is blinding and her strength could move the mountains
However it is her heart that makes the greatest impact
I will never feel a love so strong
Because she became piece of my heart for all eternity

Destiny is a curious thing
I know now that I was born to be on the back of this magnificent creature
We were a match made in heaven; written in the stars
Picture This and I, living out one destiny, together.
