

Surreal

A whisper reaches out asking me
I follow in the footsteps of another
Getting faster now creeping
Towards a star

The trees watch me dance
Pale moonlight follows
I can not see far
But I know to keep going

Soaring now only to fall again
Caught by lightning
I learn what it means to fly
Leaves blanket my mind

What I have been searching for
A single flower blooms
Roots connect neurons
A constellation now connected

The layers below the canopy
My memory fades
Patches of sun
Day has come

Fight or flight
I choose the light
Lifting beyond your silly boundaries
Waking up from dreams afar

I grab a hand and pull myself out
A never ending tangle of branches
Looking down to the grass
Infinite possibilities

That flower is gone
Vapor now impossible to grab
I reach out but no one is there
Caught in time that won't stop

A clock ticks far off
Consistency of my heart beating
Aligned with the universe
I start again

Reality

Driving miles ahead of where I am
It's 5 am and I see myself from above
My light shines too bright but not alone
I am with the city

I am separate from myself
Feeling free for the first time
Relieved from my own thoughts
I see the world

Searching the future before I go
I will be pulled together again
Time will resume
But for now I am unbounded

A tear falls for I am not here
You are not here
Nothing is here but space and time
They take control

This feeling follows to very few places
Only unbounded when alone or surrounded
Completely lost
At peace for the first time

Who will I be when I am aligned again
With space needing me
And time propelling
My thoughts come back

I am no longer