The Press

Let's face it, this isn't easy
To discover the truth of my life's journey.
With honest speculation and deep approval,
I take courage with me
Towards my destination
Making the most of today.

Through the natural clues that permeate my mind
And life's lessons that have shaped me,
I press beyond my own obstacles
Into the perfect peace that no one can
Do me, but me.

Stepping out and taking the risks
In uncharted territories,
Dimly lit by the road less traveled
By others before me
I make my way.

By pressing the olive--
Out comes the oil.
From intense pressure and heat --
A diamond is born.
My path divinely ordered
As a part of His Master Plan,
I press on
Until I reach my expected end.

Wifey

Ceremonial pearls and lace
Enchanted by being of "one-flesh"
I promised my love and loyalty
To the man that proved
He would cherish, protect
And honor me.

Me.
With all of my issues,
However, fearfully and wonderfully made.
The apple of my Father's eye
Who skillfully arranged our connection
To satisfy our heart's desire
To love and be loved
Unconditionally.

This is not based on the things we do,
But rather in spite of what we may do.
Choosing to follow His example
In patience, forgiveness and kindness
And willing to serve and give One's self.

Not many find this type of love,
It surpasses all boundaries and limitations.
Uniquely free for all to receive,
It requires faith, acceptance and trust
In the Savior's sacrifice
Of love.

Changes

The rhythm of life's motion
Moving together within a cycle,
Creating a sound
For all who are willing
To hear the melody.

Bellowing to take notice
From the clues it leaves,
The days run faster now
Moving with greater speed.

The seasons come and go
With less recognition of the times,
Varying climates
And social norms
Signs of the earth's decline

No need to worry
When troubles appear,
Take a look upward
See the remedy to fear.

Know Who holds the future
Safely in His hands,
Restoring all that was lost --
Peace in the land.
