Forgotten lyrics

There I was drowning in the midst of everything that I thought was apart of me
So lost in what I thought was real I almost lost sight of what was really there Confused by this world and it's lies
Taken aback so far I almost let go

Kept together by the bonds of my soul
Pushed on by the deep need for answer
Kept alive by the possibility of a better tommorrow
Moving through the darkness
Walking the tightrope hoping to find a sliver of light up there

Faith as thin as a ghost
Hope so slender you could see past it
I called out
Expecting no response
"I'm with you." He said unto me
Knowing better I turned away
Running as fast I could away from the truth

Mind as full as a map
Willing to find the answers on my own
Closing the door from the out side
Tears rolling down like rain
It's an unfamiliar feeling you get when you realize that for the past few years you've been....
Lost

To realize, to question

To realize that you've been sinking when you thought you were floating
To realize that the world you built around yourself was tearing you down

To realize that all you dubbed real is but fantasy

To see that beyond the world you thought was all you ever could have imagined was another more beautiful somewhere to question if you are what you thought you were

Finding that you aren't and weren't and will never be...

Head spinning so fast I couldn't even think

So full but yet so empty

So new but still so old

To realize is to take on a burden

A knowledge of the grueling past and what could have been if you had only found sooner

Going forward but still in the past somehow

Reaching for the other side but still stuck without action

Wallowing in the mud but dreaming of grass

To realize is to see that for years you've been running

In what you thought was the right direction

But maybe it wasn't you might ask

Because I did..

The day I realized.

To seek is to find

When your through with all your questions

When you've found all that you needed

The moment when there's nothing left but to take it all in and fill your self with the remedy

The moment that occurs after you've found and realized all that you needed

The moment when you see what needs to be done so clearly

When you've found the answer to the big mystery

The bridge to the other side

When the mud is no longer enough and you know the grass is somewhere out there

What else is there but to seek what your heart desires

To be free, to leave the darkness and find it's home to the warmth out there

To seek is to find

To find is to take

To take is to keep

To keep is to treasure
