A Piece of Me - Title

Intimidation brings out the worst in me, and I'm sure it does in you too.

An emotionally sordid cocktail of jealousy, insecurity, and reflection.

Jealousy is akin to seeing your reflection in a body of water, except it isn't you - it's someone else.

It's who you ought to be and who you want to be, but not who you are.

No amount of "turn your sorrow into a happier tomorrow", will fix this.

You may try, but you won't succeed.

Using your intimidation as fuel to synthesize your reflections won't mend your evil cocktail.

Who you are as a person cannot be contingent upon how the world treats you.

The world will treat you like shit, just don't become a piece of it.

Be mindful of the company you keep, and the things you reap.

Pay close attention to the thoughts in your head, and the dreams in your bed.

Enjoy the sorrow and take solace in the promise of a better tomorrow.

But most importantly, take care of the core of who you are, don't let it drift afar.

There's an art to sorrow.

Its power lies in the expression of human emotion and the beauty of validation.

Sorrow can make one think about all except tomorrow.

If you just apologize all will be rectified.

What happened to the art of a conversation?

I'm one to talk, or not! Ha!

Why have our minds become digitized?

Craving the intimacy of the screen but not the person?

When did the screen replace the person?

I thought the person was irreplaceable.

I guess I thought wrong.

Karma is what you make it.

People call her a bitch!

But my friend, I'm here to tell you she's not - she's a reflection of you because she's your mirror!

She absorbs your energy and regurgitates it out; monkey sees, monkey does, what you give out, is what you get back.

It's easy to put the blame on her and call it karma, but there's a reason why it's called "your karma" - it's yours; it's you!

She's is akin to a sponge; absorbing and releasing - absorbing the energy and releasing it back out.

Always remember there's no reason to be a bitch because karmas' got you covered.