

THE SEA

Each time I look at the sea from both far and near ,
My eyes unfold that the land mass is three times less than the sea's .
Unlike the land ,the sea is housed in unfathomable depths feared by faint hearts the world over
And is blessed with various big and small fishes and other sea creatures that live at each other's throat .

My eyes further reveal that the sea is beautifully created by God Almighty during the creation era and it can only maintain law and order as soon as man makes amends for all destruction inflicted on the land and sea .

The sea is tastefully dressed in sparkling black, gray,blue,pink and red colors which bring forth smells of natural sweetness and tidal waves like dunes of sand in the Sahara Desert .When the sea's temper wears thin ,it chatters over bubbling bays and babbles on stagnant rocks and pebbles.

In rain or sunshine,the sea luxuriates itself in producing scary sounds that reach their crescendo in darkest nights -eclipsing land's peace and tranquility .

At the birth of a new day,fishermen in life jackets move in never-ending streams to the serene shore afloat with boats ready to ply the high seas to catch different types and sizes of fish to sell at the end of each fishing day.oftentimes I gaze at the sea with an avid desire to possess its natural wealth at all costs.

When a rainstorm sweeps harshly across coastal habitation and kills a community member ,the sea gods perceived to cause the death come under reproach by all and sundry .In the event of a Tsunami,untamed strong tidal waves destroy fishermen's lives and machines and equipment .

By and large,the sea which serves as the bread basket of most coastal dwellers can be an unpredictable destroyer of especially coastal town dwellers presently exposed to the severities of climate change .
