

The Dawn of Liberty

i have a dream that one day we will be free

Each man and woman will walk with dignity into a life that calls them accordingly

To strip off these heavy thoughts and run with certainty toward the new dawn of liberty

i have a dream that one day we may escape these doubts that litter each mindscape

These chains of iron that blind like drapes

Then see with clear eyes our Truth's true shape

i have a dream that one day I could be Me

With uninhibited boldness strangling anxiety breaching society

Without Hesitation telling me who to be Wearing my selfdom fearlessly for all the world to see i have a dream that one day I could see you as you are

Not hold you to some standard some impossible bar

I could see your beauty by inspecting your scars

And marvel in wonder at your place in the stars

i have a dream that one day you could find your own self worth

The importance of You ordained at your birth

That you may know the opportunity you've been given on Earth

And show your true self with confident mirth

i have a dream that Dr. King would have a legacy that lasts in the heart of every person and remains steadfast

To live in a light that sees others as equal

To love with a mind that casts out evil

To speak with a tongue that affirms the past

To hear with ears that revere the outcast

To make with servant hands society's new caste a flexible shape No limit unsurpassed with unending possibilities always forecast a myriad of humans with opportunities vast

Each man and woman will walk with dignity into a life that calls them accordingly

To strip off these heavy thoughts and run with certainty toward the new dawn

the dawn of liberty
